A TRIBUTE TO LESTER TEXEIRA
from a summer resident

To the citizens of Mattapoisett who have known Lester Texeira over the years, winter and summer, his death brings deep sadness. But there are many of us who come to Mattapoisett only in summer and we also are heart-broken. We love this charming town not only because it is a beautiful "place of rest" where we can forget our winter responsibilities, not only because it has a sparkling harbor and golden beaches, but we love Mattapoisett because of the wonderful people who are our neighbors, or who help us at the market or the gas station and elsewhere.

For us the loss of our friend, Lester, is a very personal one because of his extraordinary warmth of manner and kindness. One could not fail to recognize his fine character, his unusual quiet skill at his business, his modesty and his readiness to offer every possible help to a customer or a friend. When their son was born we all rejoiced with Tilly and Lester and now we offer our sympathy.

We know that the greatness of a man's life is not measured by its length. Lester Texeira was a rare and wonderful person. He gave of

SUMMER IN FRANCE

Miss Roberta Turner of Church Street, Mattapoisett recently returned from a summer's stay in France where she joined the family of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bechet in Cluses, France. She lived with them as a daughter as part of the American Field Service exchange student program. The summer was a series of marvelous sights and experiences for her, as her French family showed her their country as only natives could do it.

Roberta and Ann Cramer of Dartmouth, Mass., who stayed the summer in Germany, left here together. They traveled to Montreal, Canada where the ship awaited students from every part of the country. Roberta found that her first hour on the boat was quite interesting. It seems that the cabin she was assigned to had a full complement of roommates - all boys. She was not the only Turner on the boat and the male Turner had also been treated to the same kind of unusual accomodations. The switch in rooms was made very shortly, but Roberta said that the stewards had some difficulty in understanding that there was a problem.

The trip to Europe was a busy one. There was time for deck games and diversion but most of the days were taken up with language studies. The students were assigned to an instructor on their own European country and he grounded them on the customs of the country, the money and the language.

On arrival in Rotterdam, Holland the ship passed through a canal on the way to the harbor. The hour was 3:30 A.M., but in spite of this most of the student passengers were on deck to enjoy their first impressions of Europe. The famous Dutch windmills could be seen in the distance as the group lined the rails. Rotterdam proved to be a very modern city. Since it had largely be destroyed in World War II, it has been rebuilt new. Roberta said that a most unusual feature was the roads. Each highway was built with two roads. One large strip was for autos and the smaller strip running beside it was special for bicycles. Holland is a country of bicyclists. They love to ride these bikes and probably use them more than they do autos.

The entire group traveled together to Paris. The train took them through Holland and Belgium and the northern part of France. Roberta, with 4 other girls as roommates, stayed at the Hotel De L'Acedemy in Paris. Their stay in this city was 9 days and every day was crammed with a schedule that took them to every point of interest. From 8:30 A.M. to 1 the next morning the group was on the go. They traveled by foot and by Metro and before they were through the visit they knew every part of the city. The visited the Eiffel Tower which Roberta said was not so much to look at. It is steel girders painted a brown color, and is not very beautiful close up. However, the view from the top is marvelous. The whole of Paris stretches at your feet. The great cathedral of Sacre Coeur is very close and can be studied from above. The Parisian traffic patterns, the most individual and confused anywhere, can be studied in miniature. The traffic is noisy and rather fantastic. There is no place to park so the individual Frenchman is prone to leave his car in the middle of the street which has a tendency to block the flow of vehicles still further. The sidewalk cafes are definitely on the sidewalk so that pedestrians have to walk around them into the street. Everywhere in Paris and in France the people can be seen with a bottle of wine in their hand and a loaf of bread under their arm. The city is beautiful with tree lined boulevards and flower gardens everywhere. Stalls full of flowers, gay awnings and posters give the city a flavor and color of its own. The group visited Notre Dame and in the cool dark interior they looked up through the great stained glass windows. One side of the windows does not match the other. Over the years it took to build this great church, new ideas and changes left their individual touch even in the windows. The students climbed to the top up narrow stone stairways winding in a spiral. They climbed on the roof to the peak to look at the city spread below. They visited the Louvre and Versailles. The palace of Versailles is surrounded by pools and gardens. It is a tremendous building. The hall of mirrors is just that. A hall whose walls are mirrors to make a large room reflect itself in beauty and light. The Sacre Coeur is in the section of the city where the artists can be seen at work everywhere. Some artists will even paint a scene on the sidewalks themselves. The people walk around the sidewalk paintings and deposit coins in a tin left by the artist if they want to show their appreciation. Roberta said that the "Sleeping Beauty", a ballet, was enjoyed by every one of the students on one of their last evenings in the city.

DATE OF CHURCH DEDICATION CHANGED

The Rev. Francis J. Greene announces there has been a change in the date to dedicate St. Rose of Lima Church, Vaughan Hill Road, Rochester. Unavoidable delays in finishing the inside of the church have led to a change from the original date of Wednesday to 7 P.M. September 20th.

At a meeting held at St. Rose of Lima Church the Rev. Greene expected arrival of the pews had been delayed and noted this was the "first disappointment" since construction of the church commenced. Seating capacity of the church will be 350.

Richard Cardinal Cushing will dedicate the St. Rose of Lima Church and formally bless the new church as head of diocese. The Rev. Greene said Cardinal Cushing will accept St. Rose of Lima Church as part of his authority in his diocese.

The Rev. Greene said Cardinal Cushing will go to the rectory of SS Martha and Mary Church, Lakeville, September 20th, where a State Police escort will bring him to Rochester and St. Rose of Lima Church. Concluding the formal blessing and dedication is planned for Cardinal Cushing to return to the rectory of SS Martha and Mary Church where a light luncheon will be served by the women of the parish.

Summer in France from page 8

Cluses was Roberta's new home town. She traveled there by train. It is a city of about 9,000 people and situated near the Swiss and Italian borders. The mountains form a background for this countryside. She was met by her French sisters, Nicole and Monique, who took her to her new home to meet her French family. Mr. Paul Bechet is the mayor of the city. He owns a factory which makes machines to make parts for other machines and which also assembles the parts into complete machines. Mrs. Bechet is an artist in the kitchen. Roberta said that they always had two big meals at noon and at night and never seemed to repeat a menu. They would commonly take two hours for lunch and as much or more for dinner in the evening. Everything was prepared without a recipe and was served in courses with the complimentary wine for each course. The favorite entertainment was good food and conversation. The people know all about Jackie Kennedy. They know what she is wearing and her hair style and her travels. They couldn't care less about her husband and what he is doing. They enjoy life and look upon politics as a necessary evil that should be placed in the background. They think that Charles DeGaulle is necessary, for without him there would be a revolution, and a revolution would be a lot of trouble and would disturb their lives, so DeGaulle serves his purpose.

For a month each summer, factories and shops close and everyone takes a vacation. During the month of July the Bechet family visited the French Riviera. They traveled to Antibes where they stayed at the Hotel Le'Triamon. Roberta said that the first view of the Riviera is breathtaking. As you top the last hill the water spreads before you in unbelievable color. The deep blues are mottled with light greens and pale blue greens like uncut emeralds on a velvet cloth. The yachts and fishing boats dot the water and the white beaches shine in the sun. Much of the coast is very rocky and the French seek out the rocks to picnic on and to dive from The red tile roofs rise among the palms. There are old stone homes and the most modern of hotels and it is a delightful playground for people from every part of Europe. Roberta visited Monaco and toured the palace. It is situated on the top of a hill and the view is marvelous. The whole principality spreads out below down to the harbor where the boats crowd at anchor. The Casino looks like a stately capital building, full of grandeur and dignity. Later in Nice she sat in the ruins of an old Roman arena for an open air performance of the opera Carmen.

After returning from the Riviera the family took Roberta on a tour of northern Italy through the mountains to Lake Lugano and Lago di Como. On this trip she saw the source of the Rhone River. Two ice covered mountains shed the water to form a small stream which later becomes the great river coursing through Italy to the sea. Switzerland she remembers as a country of green hills. Cows and goats grazing upon this carpet and in the background the magnificence of the mountains. She rode the teleferic at Chamonix. These cable cars holding 40 people rise from the shaded valleys to the peaks of Mont Blanc high above the clouds. Down below the miniature villages can be glimpsed through breaks in the clouds, and above stretches the shining ice covered summits. The roads on this trip wind and climb in steep curves up the sheer faces of the mountains. Narrow and unprotected by guard rails they are traveled by truck and car and bus with little mishap.

Roberta returned to Paris where the students gathered for the trip home. They embarked from Rotterdam to New York. She has pictures and memories that she will enjoy for life and an affection for her French family that she will always treasure.

GO PRACTICE YOUR NOISE

The television program PM East—PM West recently featured an entirely new music. It was completely fascinating to watch. One selection started with the musician scraping a table back and forth across the floor. While one man operated the table, another ran around busily sawing on the edge, scraping metal, filing various objects and occasionally clanging materials. In the second movement, the table operator ran a file up and down a spring. He then fastened a wire to a gibbet and scraped that until it broke. This marred the selection somewhat; however, he recovered quickly with a new twist of the wire and the music continued. In another composition, a distinguished organist played the amplifier and the piano wire. Twisting the knobs of the amplifier the organist obtained some intense squawks and then some squeaks. To balance this, he ran a file up and down the open piano strings and produced some low frequency strums. He strummed on various strings, occasionally ducking under the piano keyboard for some unexplained reason. The selection ended with some very satisfactory squawks from the amplifier and a couple of squeaks. It must be pointed out that these compositions were being played from written scores. The composer pronounced the execution as being excellent. He said that exposure to this music, while not pleasant to the beginner, would gradually become less irritating as the listener became conditioned to the noise over a period of time. In concerts, this composer often features ten minutes of complete silence as written by him. When questioned as to why his silence was better than the silence of a home closet, he said that people came to his concerts to be entertained and therefor they received pleasure from his silence because he was entertaining them. This composer was represented as a trained musician. He appeared to be completely serious and his noise is being published.

Any civilization reflects its culture in the art that it produces. The development of graphic and musical art proceeded over the centuries in precision and order to delight the eye and the ear of man. From the cave man's bones and gourds to the stringed instruments and the ever more complex horns, harps and pianos we have progressed to symphonies of rich and velvet music. It took genius and skill to write and play this music. We are now beyond this point. With a little practice, Junior will be able to scrape a satisfactory table on the floor. He will be able to master the spring and the saw with precision. The file on the piano string may take a little time; however, the knobs of the amplifier can be twisted with little skill to produce the most satisfying squeals. It is easy to predict that whole symphonies of skilled noise makers can be gathered from any contemporary community, and that genius in this field is inherent in the youngest child. Before long every neighborhood will thrill to the twang, thump and bang and scream of the children practicing their instruments without coaxing or threat. The only forseeable difficulty is the mastery of the ten minutes of complete silence as written in the score. This movement might have to be reserved for adult musicians of great skill; accomplished artists, you might say.
